Why Only Twitter Login?

TwitLess uses your Twitter account to show you a minimal version of Twitter. Thus, we require you to log in with your Twitter account. It also means we don't have to do image verification or handling any data!

TwitLess does not track any of your data or store anything beyond simple toggles in the settings page. How this works, and what pages show, can be found on the info page.

This is going to be a list of projects that might remind the user to hop off Twitter and go work on whatever... maybe?

I just don't like active threads being here and I don't want DMs to be incredibly

I was messing around in Adobe XD for a while and then realized I had to type up some really long text thing.

Instead of using a lorem ipsum plugin like a smart guy, I just decided to type it up myself!

This page will contain various toggles... but quite frankly I'm not sure what I want to put here right now.

Things will include message toggles, definitely a link to Twitter settings page, a way to view time spendature graphs (future feature) or reset all of them. There should also be a message saying that this is the only info we store?
